"Edmund, or Edward Eliot, as the name is sometimes written, was born in England about 1629 and came to America with the early patrons of the Company of the Massachusetts Bay Colony of which John Humphrey and John Endicott, the two most prominent of the six patentees of the territory extending from the Atlantic to the western ocean, and in width from a line running three miles north of the Merrimac River to one running three miles south of the Charles River. The company was ruled by a Governor and thirteen Councilors for fifty-five years.

The year of Edmund's departure from England or arrival in the Massachusetts Bay Colony has never been fixed and the first known record is in 1652 when he was taxed in the town of Salisbury and was a husbandman in the western portion of the town known as Salisbury New-Town, which was granted the privileges of a town on May 23, 1666. He received properties by grant of land in the original town of Salisbury in 1654, 1659 and 1662. When Salisbury New-Town incorporated on May 23, 1666 his property was within the bounds of this town and additional grants were made to him in 1666 and 1668. On May 28, 1668, it was decided by the General Court that 'Salisbury, New-Town may be called Emesbury' and was in the Act of Incorporation dated May 27, 1668 spelled as Amesbury.

He was made a freeman of the new town of Amesbury by taking the Oath of Allegiance in 1677 and the last record of his life was in 1680 when he is named among the residents. His Will bears the date February 26, 1675, and was probated March 17, 1684, which date gives the approximate time of his death according to the lapse of time ordinarily observed between the death of the testator and the proof of his Will December 1683, or January 1684.

His Will provides evidence of his service in the Indian Wars as he recites the reason for making it "when he was going to the war." He names his wife Sarah and son John as his legatees and in case of the death of both that his property was to go to his nearest relatives in England. The inventory of his estate amounted to 480 pounds and upwards, which made him a relatively wealthy man. Following Edward's death, she remarried a Younglove. Her father made his will in 1687 and names her in the instrument, the nearest date we have by which to judge the time of her death."

"He was the only child of Edmund and Sarah. He followed the occupation of his father and is so described as a "yeoman" at the time he took the Oath of Allegiance to the government in 1677, on arriving at military age, and before reaching his majority he was made a member of the trainband in 1680. His will was dated on February 22, 1733, and probated the following March, which would indicate it was made on his sickbed and probably deathbed. Naomi survived John as she is mentioned in his will."

They had 13 children, 10 sons & 3 daughters. They, along with at least 3 of their sons, Jacob, Nathan and Isaiah, removed from Bowdoin to Hartland soon after C/1820 and were living there in C/1830. Nathan stayed until C/1870 and removed to Milford, Ohio where he died in 1875 at 63 yrs. Jacob lived in Hartland as late as C/1850 (when his parents are living with his family) but further evidence of his whereabouts after that has not yet been found. Jacob's first wife, Sarah, is buried at Ireland Cemetery.

Report from Fort Ruby (Nevada Territory) written June 27, 1863

The Fort and Troops

Believing that anything connected with the California Volunteers, away off in this wilderness of sagebrush, will interest some of your readers, has induced me to trouble you with a short letter, and in my rough style dot down a few incidents which have transpired within the last ten days, In the first place allow me to premise that Fort Ruby is now garrisoned by a portion of two companies of the Third Infantry, California Volunteers, Company C, under Captain J. W. Stillman, and Company E, under First Lieutenant Hosmer, of Columbia, Tuolumne County, California, and Lieutenant Wm. Myers. Charles E. Kirkpatrick is the Surgeon. Lieutenant Wm. N. Allen, of Company C, is Quartermaster, and First Lieutenant J. D. Todd, of Stockton, is Adjutant of this post. The post is under the command of Major P. A. Gallagher. Company K, of the Second Cavalry, California Volunteers, was temporarily assigned to this post, but the recent Indian depredations between here and Salt Lake have kept them on the road almost constantly. This company is under the command of Captain S. P. Smith, with First Lieutenant John Quinn, and they have done some good work lately, an account of which has appeared in your columns since he surprised a party of Indians at Government Springs, about 200 miles east of this place, and succeeded in killing ten of them. A portion of Companies C and E are along the Overland Mail route, guarding the stations between here and Fish Springs, a distance of 170 miles. Each stage is accompanied by two or more soldiers from one station to the next.

An Attack by Indians

Some soldiers of Company E, four in number, and stationed at a point fifteen miles east of Deep Creek, called Cañon Station, were attacked a few days since by a party of Indians. Two of the soldiers were returning with the water cart as a guard (the water used at the station being brought from a creek some ten miles east of it). They were fired upon when within six hundred yards of the station; the Indians were concealed behind the sage bush, which they had cut and piled up for that purpose. Corporal Hervey was shot in the head and instantly killed; Private Abbott was shot in the shoulder. Both fell from the wagon. Abbott soon recovered and fired his own gun and that of his dead comrade at the Indians. He also took the pistol of Hervey and used that; then jumped into the wagon and drove to the station.

The other two soldiers were absent, having gone out for a hunt, both of whom were killed; their names were Elliott and Burgher. The body of Elliott, was found by some immigrants about half a mile from the station, close to the road, stripped and pierced with thirty balls, heart cut out, and otherwise mutilated. That of Burgher was not found until next day, about a mile off, and in the same condition.

The Indians also stripped the body of Hervey, there being no one at the station but the wounded soldier and an employee of the Overland Mail Company to prevent it. The most singular part of this affair seems to be that neither of the men killed were scalped. Burgher, however, had his whiskers cut or torn from his chin. The Indians succeeded in capturing one musket (Burgher's) and one double-barreled gun (Elliott's), with a small amount of ammunition. It is not known whether any Indians were killed, but a good deal of blood was seen on their tracks. Eighteen Indians were counted by the man at the station as they escaped across the mountains.

The following is the list of names of the killed and wounded; which will enable their friends in California to identify them: Corporal William S. Hervey, aged 30, born in Bombay (of American parents), killed ; Private Jacob Burgher, aged 41, born in Rochester (N.Y.) killed ; Private Jacob H. Elliott, aged 29, born in Hartland (Me.), killed; Ira Abbott, wounded, but not dangerously; They all enlisted in Tuolumne County, California. Burgher has two nephews in the same company by the name of Dupuy, and a sister living at Shaw's Flat, California. The bodies were all brought to Deep Creek and there interred with proper ceremonies.

Report of Major Patrick A. Gallagher 3rd California Infantry, Fort Ruby, Nevada Territory

(From the Official Records of the War of the Rebellion, Army, Series I, Vol. 50, Part 1, p. 230)

June 23, 1863 Affair at Cañon Station, Nevada Territory (written on June 28, 1863)

Captain,

I would inform the general commanding that on yesterday Assistant Surgeon Kirkpatrick returned to this post from Cañon Station with Private Abbott, of Company E, who was wounded at that place on the 23d instant. I learn from Abbott that on the morning of the 23d he and Corporal Hervey left the station as a guard to the water cart. After they had left Privates Burgher and Elliott left to go hunting, leaving the station unprotected, something which has not been done since the troops have been guarding the road. Between 11 am and 12 pm as the water cart was returning they were fired upon by Indians, who had made a screen of sage bushes, and Corporal Hervey was shot dead. Private Abbott, although wounded by a ball through his neck, jumped out of the wagon and seized Hervey's gun and pistol, and returned the fire, as did the driver of the water cart. He is confident that they hit three or four of them. This happened within about 500 yards of the station. They immediately drove there, thinking if the balance of the guard was there they might get some of the Indians, but found them gone. Soon after they saw two or three Indians going up the mountain south of the station, one of whom had a bright gun. Although they were upward of 1,200 yards off they fired at them, and from their actions immediately after think that one of them was hit. An express was immediately sent to Deep Creek, and eight of the cavalry left for the scene at once.

On their arrival they found the body of Elliott with thirty-five ball holes in it, horribly mutilated, but not scalped. Soon after they found the body of Burgher with four ball holes in it, and in about the same condition as Elliott's. The bodies of all three were taken to Deep Creek and there buried under the supervision of Lieutenant Hosmer, who left his post immediately on the receipt of the news. The Indians succeeded in getting Burgher's musket and fifty rounds of ammunition; also a double-barreled shotgun and a small quantity of powder and shot from Elliott. I have ordered Lieutenant Quinn to scout in that vicinity, and if possible discover their place of concealment. I have also increased the infantry force along the road, sending every man that can be spared from the garrison. I feel perfectly satisfied that if Burgher and Elliott had not disobeyed orders and left the station they would not have been killed, but on the contrary would have had an opportunity of rendering a good account of some of the Indians, as they were within range of their pieces, and there were seventeen counted.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Major P. A. Gallagher

Major Third Infantry California Volunteers, Commanding Post
