William first came to explore Hartland about 1796. He returned to New Hampshire where he married Sally and then returned to settle in Hartland in 1802 on the (then) St Albans side of the river very near the former Linn Woolen Mill Office (later the Library) on what is now Commercial Street.

They are living in Fairhaven, so called, in the 1810 Census in what would eventually become part of Hartland. In the same census are Abraham Moor, father of Sally, and his sons, Samuel Moor and Joseph Moor (Joseph married Deborah Smith, both buried at Ireland Cemetery). Abraham's daughters, Nancy and Olive Moor, are living with him too.

Abraham Moor was born about 1749, probably in Litchfield, New Hampshire, and died in Hartland on February 15, 1823. He was the seventh and youngest child of Major Samuel and Deborah (Butterfield) Moor. His wife, Esther (Walker) Moor, was born in Bedford, New Hampshire, April 27, 1754, the third child of Captain James and Esther (Goffe) Walker. Esther died January 26, 1841 in Hartland.

Abraham and Esther were married, probably in Bedford, New Hampshire, by 1773. They are both buried at Ireland Cemetery. Esther's older sister, Sally Walker, married Joseph Moor, an older brother of Abraham.

William and Sally removed to Corinna with their 6 youngest children (the 2 eldest children, Maria and James remained in Hartland) where Moor had earlier purchased a saw & lumber mill from Captain Joseph Ireland and remained there until their deaths.

Captain Joseph Ireland married Olive Moor, and came to Hartland. They are both buried at his namesake cemetery, Ireland Cemetery. Nancy Moor married John Steward who was a teacher early in his life and later a farmer. In 1846 they and their two youngest of six children removed to Madison, Wisconsin where he died on 16 Sep 1847. Nancy returned to Hartland here she died in 1851 and is buried at Ireland Cemetery as Nancy Steward.

From 'A Brief History of Corinna, Maine 1804-1916'; "Corinna was purchased by Dr. John Warren of Boston on June 30, 1804, (Warren also purchased Hartland, St Albans and Palmyra) the whole tract of 23,040 acres being sold at two cents per acre or roughly $460. Dr. Warren was a brother of General Joseph Warren of Bunker Hill fame and himself served as surgeon and head of the Boston hospital during the war. His purchase was described as Township Number Four in the Fourth Range of Townships North of the Waldo Patent in the County of Somerset, District of Maine."

"Warren sent Samuel Lancey, Esq., to bush out a road near the center of the township east and west, giving him in exchange for his labor, 170 acres of land. Dr. Warren induced Captain Joseph Ireland of North Newport and his nephew, Daniel Ireland, to erect a mill at what is now Corinna village. This mill was for both grist and lumber. The settlers paid for the grinding in grain and lumber hauled on "hoopling sleds." The supplies for the mill were brought on horseback from Bangor. After two years, the Irelands sold their rights to William Moor, Esq. of Hartland, and Corinna was from then until its incorporation called 'Moor's Mills' which included the whole settlement at the village. Between the date of the petition for incorporation in 1815 it was known as the Town of North Wood and with the act of incorporation on December 11, 1816, the name was changed to Corinna"

“Opening in 1904, The Maine Sanatorium was the state's first facility for the treatment of tuberculosis. The sanatorium was privately owned until 1915 when it was taken over by the state, along with Chase Memorial Sanatorium in Fairfield. The facilities were renamed the Western Maine Sanatorium and Central Maine Sanatorium respectively. People with the best chance of recovery were sent to the Western Maine Sanatorium. Those who were not expected to recover were sent to the Central Maine Sanatorium. Practicing an open air policy, patients slept on porches or in rooms that were open the outdoors. It was believed that fresh air, rest and a proper diet would help aid recovery. Dairy cows, a corn silo, creamery and large farm supplied the food for the facility. The sanatorium was also known for its Fourth of July parades, with floats and participants dressed in a variety of costumes. Games were held and the activities were open to participants who were in good health. The sanatorium was closed in July of 1959.”

They removed from Corinna soon after 1853 to Minneapolis, Minnesota living there by C/1860 with the entire family as well as Sarah's sister, Clarinda and her family. Soon after Sarah's death, Jacob moved to Santa Monica, California and remarried in 1877.

According to "A History of Corinna", it was Dr. Jacob Elliott who persuaded Levi Stewart and his brother David to leave Corinna in 1858 for Minneapolis where Levi established his law offices and amassed his great fortunes through his law firm and his numerous real estate investments. His net worth was valued at about 20 million dollars at the time of his death.

"Minneapolis began as a riverfront outpost in the 1840's when Colonel John Stevens built the first permanent residence. Lakewood Cemetery, currently with 38,439 interments, was established in 1871, four years after Minneapolis was incorporated. The cemetery site was located in what was originally countryside, nestled between Lakes Harriet and Calhoun. By 1895, the Lake Harriet Streetcar brought people to the cemetery from their homes in and around downtown Minneapolis. The fare was a nickel. It has one of the largest cemetery greenhouse operations in the United States. Groundskeepers plant nearly 100,000 flowers each season, including many unusual plant species found nowhere else in the state."
