s/o Hanson H. Webb (IC) & Emily Patterson (IC) of St Albans

b. 1 May 1836 St Albans

d. 21 Aug 1898 Pasadena, California (Mountain View Cemetery, Altadena, California)

They removed to Skowhegan from Hartland in 1875 where they raised their family. They removed to Pasadena, California in 1893. She wrote poems and had many published under the name Emily Page Webb. "Emily Page Webb was born in Hartland, a small manufacturing town on the Sebasticook River, about 1838. Her father's house commanded a fine view of the country and the river where it leaped the falls, and dashed its white current against the rocky islands. No white hand of winter ever stilled its murmurs, and no hot breath of summer ever drank up its sparkling freshness. The broad, low hills on the north and west, and a dark green line of forest on the east seemed to encircle this little town with a magic charm, while far away to the south, the silver line of the river rolled its way through the meadows. Here, amid this quiet beauty, Emily spent her childhood and youth. Her love of poetry and talent of expressing herself in verse showed itself before she was ten years of age. Equally strong was her loving desire to assist her mother; picture to yourself a light little girl, with laughing blue eyes and rosy cheeks, working before school in the kitchen, and, at the same time, putting her fancies into words. In later years, no household work ever seemed to interfere with the sweet songs she had to sing. When she was old enough to attend the St. Albans Academy her poetic power was soon discovered, and she was called upon to write for the lyceum papers, for festivals or any public occasion where wit and sentiment were required. In October, 1861, she was married to Mr. Luther H. Webb, her schoolmate and lover from early youth. The first years of their married life were spent in Hartland, but in 1875 they removed to Skowhegan, where they still live. She is the mother of five children, two girls and three boys. Nina, her first child, died in early infancy. Her domestic life has been a happy one. where parents and children are congenial spirits, united in aim, intellect and taste. When the Woman's Club was organized in Skowhegan, she joined and was made secretary, where the wit and brilliancy of her reports gave her a high standing in public favor. Since then, she has been president of the Club, and "poet laureate" of every public occasion. Her noble womanhood, her tender regard for the feelings of others, her insight and tact in dealing with those around her, portray a character of rare beauty that gives added charm to her verse."

It is unclear whether George H. Page is the son of Edward Page or the son of John Page. He is living with John and his family in Hartland in C/1850 but he is listed at the end of the names and is some 14 years older than all the children so he MIGHT be a brother to John. Neither his birth or death certificate have been found nor his marriage to confirm either way. After he married Mary they removed to Madison soon after the death of their oldest daughter, Eda, in 1862 where he was a tanner in C/1870 and C/1880.
